Character Options

There is so much homebrew out there that there is no way I could make this an exhaustive, comprehensive list, but I did my best effort to cover those that I have been asked about. To those of you online seeing this, please keep in mind: you're not playing at my table. I'm not telling you, "No, you can't play this thing."

Worldbuilding

My worldbuilding is probably my biggest priority in regards to the line-up of options I allow or ban. I like to build fairly rustic mid-magic, low-tech worlds that—while potentially taking inspiration from real-world cultures—aren't pinned down to a specific culture.

"Joke" Characters

If you want to play a joke character build or a copy-paste of a pre-existing character from fiction, it's fine for a one-shot, but I don't think they're appropriate for long campaigns.

Allowed

Creators, if your class doesn't appear on this list, please don't take it as a personal jab. I may not have evaluated them yet. Design sensibilities vary from person to person and there's a certain type of fantasy I like to evoke with my Dungeons & Dragons games. Also, there's tons of ways people have tried to design similar concepts. We'll all have our preferences, it's totally subjective.

Official Classes

The Official Classes table lists the classes released by Wizards of the Coast that are allowed for play at my tables. Any subclass I ban are shown as well. If an asterisk (*) appears next to a class, it has received significant changes that are detailed in the "... with Revisions" section. Any published fifth edition works of Wizards of the Coast are considered "Official Classes" for the purposes of this document, including those of Acquisitions Inc. and Critical Role.

Regarding /r/unearthedarcana Classes

I get frequently asked about work submitted to this subreddit, particularly about those appearing in the "Curated List." As of the time of writing this, a vast majority of the work that appears on the curated list hasn't been updated in 4 years and many of the original creators on that list are no longer making work for 5E. I've seen a few classes there that would need updating for me to feel confident in recommending them.

Allowed for Playtest

Classes that I allow under the understanding that the class is in the design phase and is likely to change appear in this table. I'll update this PDF later on when these classes go public.

Playtest Classes

Class	Creator
Psychic	Darel Dominguez
Wyrd	Haggard Clint
Zodiac	Taron Pounds

Allowed on Probation

I've given these options an evaluation pass, but I have not seen them in play. I am willing to allow them if I'm asked by a player under the agreement that I may ask them to change their class if something becomes an issue. I trust the design sensibilities of the creators listed to at least see what happens.

Probationary Classes

Class	Creator
Craftsman[1]	Mike Holik
Dracoknight	Ross Leiser
Emergent	Ross Leiser
Inventor[2]	KibblesTasty
Investigator	Mike Holik
Scion	Darel Dominguez
Tarrochi	Alex Tanner
Warlord	KibblesTasty
Warmage	Mike Holik

Endorsements

The following classes aren't ones I use at my table for one reason or another, but I have evaluated them and would endorse them for 5e play.

Endorsed Classes

Class	Creator
Alchemist	Mage Hand Press
Binder	Mike Holik
Blood Hunter[3]	Matthew Mercer
Channeler	Mitchell Turnbull
Gunslinger	Mage Hand Press
Lacer	Alex Tanner
Occultist	KibblesTasty
Savant	LaserLlama
Spiritualist	Benjamin Huffman
Witch	Mage Hand Press

[1] I feel like the Craftsman might crowd-up all the Supplier classes I allow.

[2] Considering this as a replacement for Artificer, but I haven't had interest.

[3] I can only recommend the 2020 update with the changes on D&DBeyond.
